MISSION TO LEAVE THE MAJESTIC

AT QUARANTINE.

A report was carried to Washington by Congress-Men who took part in the Tammany Fourth of July celebration in East Fourteenthest, that the reason why Mr. Croker remained upon the Majestic until Washington, July 6.—Representatives of railroad washington. she reached her pier on Wednesday, and was not taken off at Quarantine, as had been arranged, was that Acting Secretary Scott Wike, of the Treasury Department, had refused Health Officer William T. Jenkins's request that he be permitted to take Mr. Croker off. The story caused considerable discussion among politicians yesterlay, some of whom saw in the incident a deliberate purpose on the part of the Cleveland Administration to treat Mr. Croker with indignity part of the Cleveland Administration to treat Mr. Croker with indignity.

Dr. Jenkins, when asked about this statement of the Congressman yesterday, dended at first that there had been any smalleding or slighting of his famous brother-in-law by the Treasury Department. "I did not receive any telegram from a Treasury official refusing permission to take Mr. Croker off the Majestic," he said, "Mr. Croker never had any desire to leave the Majestic at Quarantine. He preferred to go straight to the steamship pler, liad he desired to leave her and come up to the city on my boat, the Governor Flower, I should have taken him off without asking anybody's permission. Then the Doctor added in an explanatory tone, "I should have exacted it as a return for the many courtesles extended by me to the Treasury officials."

tone, 'I should have exacted it as a retril for the many courtesies extended by me to the Treasury officials."

Later the Health Officer became convinced that his statement was liable to misconstruction. He admitted that he had telegraphed whice to the Treasury Department at Washington, requesting that an order be issued allowing Mr. Croker and his two sons to leave the steamship and come up to the city on the Health Officer's boat, but received no answer to either of his messages. Dr. Jenkins added that the only reason he had for asking the permission was that it might be used in case the Majestle arrived at alight. In that case only it was proposed to transfer Mr. Croker to his boat, the Governor Flower.

The Doctor said also that he had been informed that the failure of the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, Scott Wike, to respond to the request was that he regarded it as an unusual one. "Everybody knows," the Doctor said, "that it is a very common thing for the Treasury Department to issue orders of this kind. I could name a dozen prominent New-Yorkers who are every year transferred to their yachts down the bay with the sanction of the Treasury Department."

There was some bitter feeling among Mr. Croker's devoted friends yesterday when it became known that the Democratic officials in Washington had treated Dr. Jenkins's request with ignominious neglect. Some of them were disposed to hold Mr. Cleveland responsible for the matter.

THE EX-CHIEF MAY BE IN TOWN TO DAY. There was a general expectation among Tammany There was a general expectation among Tammany Hall friends of Richard Croker that he would be in the city again to-day. They based their faith on the fact that Mr. Croker's horse, Dobbins, is entered to run in the rich Realization Stakes to-day. They thought that he would leave Richfield Springs, where his family are spending the summer, last evening. But Commissioner Daly and other prominent Wigwam men who are in the ex-boss's confidence expressed doubts about his coming. No one was seen who had received any direct word from Mr. Croker on the subject.
